Manufacturing process of Muji Lavender Essential Oil

Essential oils are produced using the old-fashioned way.

Raw materials of Muji essential oils are harvested in the plant producing countries around the world. For example, lavender is produced, harvested and processed in the Provence region, France, where lavender is called a treasure of Provence.

Muji Lavender Essential Oil is produced using steam distillation. Lavender is placed in a pot with steam blowing into it, and vapour containing the fragrance components will be generated. The vapour will become liquid after being cooled. Only the essential oil on the upper layer is carefully extracted over a period of time.
